The Ultimate Guide to Setting Up a Limited Company vs Sole Trader for Creative Professionals

- Ownership & Control

Sole Trader: You own and run the business alone.
Limited Company: The business is a separate legal entity, and you act as a director/shareholder.

- Liability

Sole Trader: You're personally responsible for all business debts.
Limited Company: Your personal assets are protected—liability is limited to the company.

- Taxation

Sole Trader: Pay Income Tax and National Insurance on profits.
Limited Company: Pays Corporation Tax; directors can take a salary + dividends, which may reduce overall tax.

- Administration

Sole Trader: Simple to set up and manage with fewer reporting duties.
Limited Company: More paperwork, formal accounts, and HMRC filings are required.

- Credibility & Growth

Limited Company: Often seen as more professional, can attract more clients/investors.
Sole Trader: May be easier for freelancers or small-scale operators but less scalable.
